I'd like to find out what I have to do to get this done. I am not sure if I did it correctly. The program wants to know the ACIDR brand which I don't have it as I bought it second hand. Is there a way I can fix this? I have tried not enter the ACIDR brand but the APQ8064AS2. But it gives me an error. Is there a way I can get the brand from Windows? I have also tried it with this ACIDR, and still the same error comes up I tried this but still didn't get it. Hello everyone, I am using a Acer GT540 laptop with Windows 10 as operating system and I recently got hold of the HP Touchsmart tm2 gaming tablet with Windows 10 as operating system. After a while I noticed that the battery of the Acer tablet were going down very quickly and I started to check the Battery Doctor app where I noticed that a process named hp.exe was consuming too much of the power and the battery was getting discharged before going to sleep mode. At the end of the day, I was not able to use the computer for anything for the entire day. I then started checking the app history and realized that the hp.exe process was started again and again due to the fact that it was detected that some of the files in the computer had to be removed and repaired. I then did a restore and the battery situation improved. After this, I tried to delete hp.exe from the computer and it was able to find the program. Then, I ran the Battery Doctor and checked the "Stop being found" option on the hp.exe entry and everything went normal again. When I ran the Battery Doctor again, it didn't show any other process that was consuming much power. Now, I don't really know why this happened and what can I do to prevent it from
